

NATION'S EYE ON WOODROW WILSON

Princeton's President May Be Democratic Candidate For the Governorship of New Jersey.

Tendency Growing to Let Educational Theorists Experiment With American Political Conditions.

By J. A. EDGERTON.
PRESIDENT WOODROW WILSON of Princeton University is being boomed for governor of New Jersey as a preliminary to his nomination as the Democratic candidate for president. That is the latest big political fact that has challenged the notice of the American people.

The sponsors of Wilson's boom for president and therefore of his candidacy for governor are said to be ex-Senator James Smith of New Jersey, Roger C. Sullivan of Illinois and Colonel George Harvey, editor of Harper's Weekly. The announcement was made after President Wilson had been in conference at the Lawyers' club in New York.

For all of these several reasons and some others political wiseacres opine that Wall street is back of the move. They recall that Colonel Harvey fought Roosevelt, that Roger Sullivan was read out of the Democratic party by Bryan and that ex-Senator Jim Smith has long been regarded as a little brother of the trusts.

However these things be, the big papers of the country are taking Woodrow Wilson's candidacy for governor of New Jersey seriously, and if he should be nominated and elected to that office his candidacy for the presidency would be more serious yet. Therefore he is a factor to be reckoned with.

Mentioned For 1908.

It was in 1906 that Colonel Harvey first nominated Wilson for president. He threw it out as a mere brilliant passing thought, like so many of the Harvey suggestions, but contrary to his expectations—and his experience—it "caught on." All sorts of letters were received from all sorts of corners of the land approving the proposal. For once in his life Colonel Harvey had struck a popular chord, so he kept on booming Wilson.

True, nothing came of it in 1908. Bryan wanted that nomination, and the Democratic party wanted him to have it. Now apparently both Bryan and the party have changed their minds and there is a chance for somebody else. "Why not Wilson?" says Harvey, so he tries for the delicious experience of again striking the popular chord. But he has grown wiser in the four years. He has learned that the American people demand in the presidency a man of some political experience. So he decides to try his candidate in the governorship of New Jersey and so qualify him for the bigger job. At least to a man up a political tree that looks like the psychology of the proposition.

Let us give Colonel Harvey due credit for one thing. He has again caused that coveted popular chord to vibrate. The talk of Wilson for governor is buzzing all over New Jersey, and soon the gossip of him for president will be humming throughout the country.

Wilson a Cleveland Democrat.

Woodrow Wilson was the friend of Grover Cleveland. While the ex-president was a lecturer at Princeton the two frequently discussed politics and kindred topics. Their views were in close accord, both believing in lofty standards, individual honesty and courage, both being old school Democrats and both opposing Bryan. Public affairs are congenial topics with Dr. Wilson, for, while his highest reputation has been gained as an educator, his chief interest is political economy and government. Possibly that is because he was born in Virginia or because he once practiced law in Atlanta, or it may be due to temperament.

Wilson is not only a political economist, but a historian, some of whose works have become text books. Among others he is the author of "Congressional Government," which appeared in 1885 and immediately gained him a reputation as an original thinker. "The State," which came out in 1889, dealing with all branches of constitutional government; "Division and Reunion," covering American history from 1829 to 1889; "More Literature and Other Essays," "George Washington" and a "History of the People of the United States."

Most of these books are standard authorities in colleges, and all of them show research, scholarship and in places brilliancy. "Division and Reunion," while written from the viewpoint of the southerner, reveals a breadth and wholesome Americanism that rob it of offense for northern readers.

Has Grasp of Events.

In all his political and historical writings Dr. Wilson shows himself a fundamental Democrat with a peculiar insight into the spirit and purposes of the founders and builders of the nation. He is also a lecturer who speaks before popular assemblies as well as before educational and scientific bodies. His voice is said to resemble that of Henry Ward Beecher.

Dr. Wilson is fifty-three years of age and was graduated from Princeton at the age of twenty-two. He was christened Thomas Woodrow, and in college was called "Tommy," but like Grover Cleveland, who was originally Stephen Grover, he amputated the first name. After leaving Princeton Wilson studied law in the University of Virginia and practiced in Atlanta for two years. It was while in Georgia that he met and later married Miss Ellen Louise Axson, a belle of Savannah.

From 1883 to 1885 he took a post-graduate course in Johns Hopkins, after which he became professor of history and political economy at Bryn Mawr. He next held the same chair at Wesleyan university. From 1890 to 1902 he was professor of jurisprudence and politics at Princeton. While in this position he was offered the presidency of other colleges at an advance of salary, but preferred to remain with his alma mater. Since 1902 he has been president of Princeton.

Knows a Good Story.

Despite the fact that he is a dignified educator, Dr. Wilson enjoys and on occasion tells a good story. Here is one concerning his predecessor, the late Dr. McCosh.

Wilson says that McCosh was known to crack a joke only once. It was

Of the trusts he has said: "The thing that keeps water in stocks is secrecy. If this board were taken out of the sluiceway the water would all run out, and then people would know what they had left."

College Presidents In Public Office.

We have had much talk of the scholar in politics, but outside of diplomatic positions and a few commissions we have never placed a college president in public office. President Taft made Professor H. C. Emery the head of the tariff board and asked President Hadley of Yale to take first place on the commission to look into stock watering. James B. Angell, Andrew D. White and some others have been recognized in foreign ambassadorships. Jacob Gould Schurman was on the Philippines commission, but we never put the head of a college at the head of the nation. There is one exception, I believe, as James A. Garfield in his youth had been president of a small college.

Why should we not draft the knowledge, training and high ideals of the teachers in our government service? For example, why should not the trained political economist have some part in the actual working out of the political economy of the nation? If it be objected that they are only theorists, then give them a chance to correct the defect by practical experience. Both the college and the government would be the gainers, the government in exat an evangelical alliance attended by ministers of various denominations. Dr. McCosh was there as a Presbyterian. The presiding officer, a Baptist, remarked:

"Brethren, I presume that, whatever else our differences may be in denominational belief, we can safely say that the Apostles' creed is a platform upon which we can all stand."

Thereupon Dr. McCosh leaned over to his neighbor, the Methodist minister, and whispered in his rich Scotch brogue:

"I should na care to 'descend into hell' with an Episcopalian."

Here is another good story that Dr. Wilson tells: A long winded and ancient southern lawyer had been making a plea for three whole days. The judge became impatient and in as polite a way as he could admonished him to cut it short.

"And do you know," says Dr. Wilson, "the old barrister declared that the last four days of his argument were a marvel of condensation."

Recommended Own Portrait.

A Princeton man now located in New York relates the following anecdote of a chance meeting with Dr. Wilson:

Going into Scribner's bookstore one morning this gentleman saw a smooth faced, middle aged man in glasses and without a hat and naturally took him for a clerk. Woodrow Wilson had just been elected president of Princeton, and the former student wanted to find out something about him. Of the supposed clerk he asked for some book by Wilson containing his portrait.

"There is no portrait of Wilson in any of his books," replied he in the glasses, "but if you will look in"—here he named a certain magazine, giving the month and year—"you will find a fair likeness of him."

Then, picking up a hat, he bowed and went out.

"Do you know who that was?" asked the mystified Princeton man of a real clerk this time.

"Professor Woodrow Wilson," was the answer.

Here is one of Dr. Wilson's mottoes: "You don't send a boy to college to find an education; it's to find himself."

Women as Well as Men are Made Miserable by Kidney and Bladder Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh, or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also a pamphlet telling all about Swamp-Root, including many of the thousands of testimonial letters received from sufferers who found Swamp-Root to be just the remedy needed. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure and mention this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

SCRATCHING POSTS FOR HOGS

Plant One Or Two And Note The Comfort They Afford—They Are A Cure For Vermin

Too

A modest demand which every hog would make if he knew how, would be for a scratching post. Such posts, in the opinion of many hog growers, are not only a source of great comfort to hogs, (the picture of a hog or a pig scratching himself and softly grunting his content, is worth a couple of hours of any man's time in fixing up a pig post), but the post moreover be made useful in ridding the animals of lice or scaly skin. A successful Maryland hog grower adopts this plan: Firmly plant in the hog run a hickory or oak post four inches in diameter. Coil a manila rope around the post as high as the hog stands, and staple it on securely. Then thoroughly saturate the rope with crude petroleum, and it becomes an ideal scratching post for hogs and pigs. They will rub against it continually, and oil is fatal to vermin. Kerosene can be used but it evaporates too readily. —Washington, D. C. Guy E. Mitchell.

The worshippers in a certain chapel had some trouble to keep their faces straight a short time ago. During the service some commotion was caused by a gentleman who accidentally ignited a box of wax matches in his pocket and was trying to put them out, while his alarmed neighbors struggled equally hard to help him. The minister, being shortsighted, could not make out the reason of the disturbance, and, thinking to diplomatically cover the incident, he innocently said: "Brethren, there is a little noise going on. Until it is over let us sing 'Sometimes a Light Surprises.'" —London Answers.
